Mission Of Nazi Deputy Remains Mystery

'Frau' Stunned

FRAU Hess, above, wife of Deputy Nazi Fuehrer Rudolf Hess, is described in Berlin as being "completely stunned" at the action of her husband who flew to Scotland and there surrendered to British authorities. Frau Hess and their baby son were not molested by the German authorities, it was said, because they were in no way involved in Hess' act.

TWO DELEGATES IN WASHINGTON FOR CONFERENCE

Determined to impress the War Department in Washington with their opposition to the rumored army cantonment site in Ross and Pickaway Counties, despite the War Department's announcement that the 52,000 acres of land considered was too valuable for agricultural purposes to justify placing a camp there, anti-cantonment delegates were conferring with War Department officials Wednesday.

The delegates, James R. Tootle, chairman of the anti-cantonment group, and Ward Peck, Pickaway County delegate, were expected to tell officials of the War Department that any move to establish a camp site in Ross and Pickaway Counties would be opposed by farmers living in the area.

Most farmers of the rumored area, however, which would have included a large portion of Wayne, Deercreek and Perry Townships, were confident that their farms would not be molested. Letters from Undersecretary of War Robert P. Patterson to farmers who sent letters of protest to the War Department informed the farmers that the land was too valuable for army camp purposes.

HESS WRITING, LONDON HEARS

Fuehrer's Aide Believed At Private Home; Commons Awaits Churchill's Report

LONDON, May 14—The entire medical staff of a private nursing home in London was flown today to the bedside of Rudolf Hess, fugitive No. 3 Nazi chieftain, who Britain hopes may supply the key to victory over Nazi Germany.

While official circles continued to deprecate wild speculation about Hess' mission—particularly to the effect that his flight from Germany means a full-scale split in the Nazi regime—a few definite facts emerged from the welter of mystery.

First, he is not in a hospital any longer, but is being held in some secret retreat on a heavily camouflaged private estate "in the depths of a nameless area."

Second, because of the very nature of his place of incarceration, no one except government officials and medical men bound to secrecy have seen him or talked to him since he dropped out of the skies Saturday night on a desolate moor near the residence of the Duke of Hamilton on the outskirts of Glasgow.

Third, the true reasons for Hess' visit may not even be fully known as yet to Prime Minister Winston Churchill himself. He is being questioned and requested, and not until British officials are convinced of the truth will anything be said.

Specialists Present
Two eminent brain specialists are among those assigned to the one-time deputy Nazi leader who was slated to fill Reichsfuehrer Adolf Hitler's shoes. Two other medical men, described as "king's physicians," also are on hand. Likewise there are medical attendants from the Army Medical Corps—men who can be trusted to divulge nothing and say nothing. The Hess colony also includes representatives of the army, navy, air force and foreign officers and intelligence units of the secret service—all hoping, in good time, to "break open" the real reason for Hess' fantastic undertaking and (Continued on Page Seven)

NAZIS FIRM ON 'ILLUSION' IDEA

Hess Wanted To See Duke Of Hamilton About Plan For Peace

BERLIN, May 14—An ambitious "illusion"—belief that he could fly to Britain and bring back a peace agreement to the Reich—was credited to Rudolf Hess by the German government today.

An official announcement stated examination of Hess' documents revealed he planned to fly to the Duke of Hamilton in Scotland and then appeal to Britain, over the head of Prime Minister Winston Churchill, for an immediate, "common-sense" peace understanding with Germany.

(Editor's Note: When Hess parachuted to earth in Scotland Saturday night he landed on farmland on the estate of the Duke of Hamilton, a former member of the Anglo-German Fellowship Association, an organization no longer recognized in Britain. Today's German announcement indicates Hess was at least sane enough to fly some 800 miles from Augsburg and hit his Scottish target "on the nose.")

According to the German statement, Hess planned to appeal to the British to make peace as the only way to avoid "destruction of the British Empire."

German authorities said the documents of the former deputy chief of the Nazi party clearly show he was under the spell of this "obsession or illusion"—the idea that through his "English peace friends" he would succeed in "bringing back to Germany a peace agreement ending the war."

To Avoid Churchill
The Hess documents, according to informed German quarters, specify that he intended to deal only through personal friends in England and that he planned to "avoid Churchill."

RUSSIAN ENVOY BLOC FIGHTING ASKS TO VISIT CONVOYS TALKS SECRETARY HULL OF VITAL STEPS

WASHINGTON, May 14—For the first time in many months, Soviet Ambassador Constantin Oumansky today arranged to confer with Secretary of State Cordell Hull.

Discussions for an improvement of relations between the United States and Soviet Russia have been deadlocked owing to this government's refusal to approve the shipment of machine tools to the Soviet Union.

POLICE, FIREMEN SET UP $200 FOR RESUSCITATOR

Police, firemen and Kiwanis Club members have set aside $200 of their receipts from the Police and Firemen's Ball for the purchase of a resuscitator. Dan McClain, chairman of the committee sponsoring the event, announced Wednesday that the $200 allowance for the resuscitator was taken from the total receipts collected from the Ball, with outstanding bills to be paid from the remaining funds. Actual net receipts from the Ball have not been determined.

The instrument which police, firemen and Kiwanis Club members hope to purchase costs about $400 and with donations from outside organizations the committee believes the necessary amount can be secured.

WASHINGTON, May 14—The senate anti-convoys bloc was called into secret session today to consider postponement of a showdown fight on proposals to prohibit use of the navy to convoy munitions to Britain as congressional friends and foes of the administration's foreign policy demanded that President Roosevelt take the public into his confidence on the aid-democracies program.

The meeting was ordered as some non-interventionists voiced the opinion that it would be unwise to press for adoption of the Tobey "rider" to the bill authorizing requisition of foreign ships in U. S. harbors, which would prohibit the President from ordering convoys.

The non-interventionists, it was explained, are united in their opposition to use of the navy to foil the German submarine and air menace to British ships. They argued only the question of method and strategy in pressing their attack.

Sen. Tobey (R) N. H. vigorous foe of war, is expected to urge his fellow non-interventionists to rally behind his proposed amendment which will be considered today.

PRICES FOR HOGS GOING UP; HEAVY MARKET HINTED

Paralleling a sudden rise in hog prices on the Columbus and Chicago markets, the local price of hogs at the Pickaway Livestock Association sale Wednesday jumped to $9.

Harry Briggs, manager of the Livestock Association, predicted at noon Wednesday there would be a large run of hogs and a light run of cattle at Wednesday afternoon's sale. Prices, he said, would probably approach the $9.05 quoted on the Columbus market.

High prices of grain and the general stimulation of agricultural prices through the nation's defense program are responsible for the high markets, Mr. Briggs said.

Attempt Being Made To Halt Supplies Being Taken To District

WASHINGTON, May 14—Germany's proclamation of the Red Sea as a war zone following President Roosevelt's opening of that area to American shipping, today brought the declaration from a spokesman for the U. S. Maritime Commission that "we will pay no attention to what Germany says."

While authoritative circles regarded the German move as injecting a grave new note in the aid-democracies program, most informed officials indicated that Berlin's action will be ignored.

John J. Dempsey, maritime commissioner, said that "the President of the United States determines the war zones as far as we are concerned, not Hitler," adding:

"That's what we will abide by. We will pay no attention to what Germany says. We will do what the President of the United States says."

Coming after Mr. Roosevelt recently lifted the Neutrality Act from the Red Sea in order to open up those waters to American ships bearing war supplies to Britain for use in the middle east, the move was viewed as an attempt to halt these shipments.

Areas Not Recognized

It was pointed out, however, that the President has declared that the U. S. does not even recognize extension of the German "zone of hostilities" around Iceland two weeks ago. He said that American shipping can go anywhere except in those combat zones proclaimed under the Neutrality Act and that U. S. warships legally can go anywhere in (Continued on Page Seven)

FIVE UNMASKED MEN RAID BANK, FLEE WITH $5,000

ELDRED, Pa., May 14—Five unmasked gunmen held up the First National Bank at Eldred, Pa., and escaped today with loot estimated by bank officials at from $5,000 to $6,000. No one was injured in the swift stickup.

"We do not know exactly how much is missing but the men got the cash from only one window." While one gunman vaulted over the counter and scooped up the cash from the window tended by Teller Frederick Loop, another held up Seglund and the bank's president, E. E. PARKING METER PLAN IS HINTED

Official Circles Of City Discuss Possibility; Confab Scheduled

As Circleville merchants and councilmen prepared to work out a downtown parking system at a joint meeting in the council chamber Wednesday night, a new plan was being whispered in official circles, namely, parking meters.

Whether or not the parking meter proposal would meet with the approval of either the council or the merchants was not known, but indications were that the subject would come up at Wednesday night's meeting.

Those advocating the parking meter plan maintain that the meters could be secured on a rental basis and paid for by revenue collected from them. Meters would be placed on Main and Court Streets in the downtown section.

BRITISH PLANES IN HEAVY RAID ON HELGOLAND

LONDON, May 14—Attacking from altitudes only a few hundred feet, RAF planes yesterday successfully bombed and machine-gunned the German base at Helgoland, authorities declared today, adding that shipping off the coasts of Holland and France also was attacked.

The Helgoland assault "caused great confusion," officials said. They declared several ships were sunk or damaged in an attack on the German-held base at St. Nazaire.

Weather during the night was declared unsuitable for large-scale operations, but a group of RAF fighters attacked an air-drome at Ostend.

Jetties, buildings and other objectives at the Helgoland naval base were bombed, it was announced, and a number of fires were started.

Dockside buildings at St. Nazaire were damaged, the Air Ministry said, and a 12,000-ton (Continued on Page Seven)

11 Shipyards Handling Big Defense Orders Tied Up In Double Pay Fight

HARTFORD, Conn., May 14—Work on $30,000,000 worth of machineguns and other weapons for the United States and British governments was suspended today as an estimated 5,000 employees at the Colt's Patent Firearms Manufacturing Company remained out on strike.

Mass picketing at the main plant, which sprawls for four blocks along the banks of the Connecticut River, began shortly after 7 a. m. today. Twenty-five Hartford policemen remained on duty in the vicinity to maintain order.

Labor representatives, company officials, federal conciliators and state mediation officials were scheduled to meet to discuss the workers' demands for a flat 20 cents an hour increase in pay, time and a half for overtime, and a week's vacation with pay.

Robert F. Mintz of the CIO's United Electrical, Radio and Machine Workers' Union, announced that his union had not called the strike, but that the employees had authorized his organization to represent them in the negotiations. Mintz said that about 75 percent of the workers had joined the union, "many of them in the last couple of days."

Work At Standstill

The strike which began when the night shift employees quit their jobs was of the "mushroom" variety. The day shift reported but left the plant in straggling groups, and by this morning work had come to a standstill.

Today's meeting was called at the request of Morgan Mooney, deputy state labor commissioner, and Thomas F. Burns of the Office of Production Management, who flew here from Washington. Union representatives will report the result of the conference to a strikers' mass meeting.

NEW YORK, May 14—Otto Strasser, one of the original founders of the Nazi party, and now leader-in-exile of the anti-Hitler "black front," today expressed the view that Rudolf Hess made his dramatic flight from Germany to Scotland to stave off an impending military coup d'etat to overthrow Chancellor Hitler.

Strasser, who has known Hess for 20 years, does not believe that the chancellor's deputy fled to the British Isles to betray his Fuehrer. Talking from Montreal in a telephone interview with International News Service, Strasser, who quit Germany in 1934 to save his life from Hitler's "blood purge," declared:

LONDON, May 14—The Vichy government is about to embark on open war collaboration with Nazi Germany, a usually reliable source reported today.

VICHY, May 14 — The French cabinet council, presided over by Chief of State Marshal Henri Philippe Petain, today unanimously approved the results of Franco-German negotiations undertaken by French Vice Premier Admiral Jean Darlan.

An official communique said effects of the negotiations "soon will be apparent."

The cabinet approved the negotiations after Darlan explained them in a formal statement.

The new collaboration between Germany and France, an excellent source revealed, will go far beyond mere economic cooperation.

PARKING METER PLAN IS HINTED

Official Circles Of City Discuss Possibility; Confab Scheduled

As Circleville merchants and councilmen prepared to work out a downtown parking system at a joint meeting in the council chamber Wednesday night, a new plan was being whispered in official circles, namely, parking meters.

Whether or not the parking meter proposal would meet with the approval of either the council or the merchants was not known, but indications were that the subject would come up at Wednesday night's meeting.

Those advocating the parking meter plan maintain that the meters could be secured on a rental basis and paid for by revenue collected from them. Meters would be placed on Main and Court Streets in the downtown section.

Official proposal of the Retail Merchants' Division of the Chamber of Commerce to be presented at the council session will (Continued on Page Seven)

BRITISH PLANES IN HEAVY RAID ON HELGOLAND

LONDON, May 14—Attacking from altitudes only a few hundred feet, RAF planes yesterday successfully bombed and machine-gunned the German base at Helgoland, authorities declared today, adding that shipping off the coasts of Holland and France also was attacked.

The Helgoland assault "caused great confusion," officials said. They declared several ships were sunk or damaged in an attack on the German-held base at St. Nazaire.

Weather during the night was declared unsuitable for large-scale operations, but a group of RAF fighters attacked an air-drome at Ostend.

Jetties, buildings and other objectives at the Helgoland naval base were bombed, it was announced, and a number of fires were started.

Dockside buildings at St. Nazaire were damaged, the Air Ministry said, and a 12,000-ton (Continued on Page Seven)

Garage To Be Most Modern, Government Employees Declare

Civilian Conservation Corps officials Wednesday were hurrying to completion the CCC repair garage at Clinton and Half Avenue, and reported that by the end of the week activity at the garage would be in full swing.

At present ten mechanics are working at the building. Fifteen trucks in need of repair already have been moved into the garage, as well as garage supplies, tools and other equipment. When all men and equipment have been moved here from the Columbus building, the repair garage will be one of the best of its kind in the country, CCC officials believe.

Repair work, which includes servicing CCC trucks and mechanized equipment from all Ohio and parts of West Virginia, will provide employment for about 25 or 30 men. Most of the men to be employed at the garage will be transferred from Columbus.

The one story structure, previously the M. G. Goeller broom factory building, was leased to the War Department for ten years by the First National Bank. It provides the CCC with 25,000 square feet of floor space. The building has been painted on the inside and work benches and garage equipment set up. A paint room has been built in the east end of the building.

Conservation League's Check Aids Milk Fund

A gift of $25 from the Child Conservation League was received by the Circleville Benevolent Association at the regular meeting in the city cottage Tuesday afternoon. The money is to be used to supply milk, 26 families being on the list at this time.

Miss Florence Dunton was in the chair for the business hour, plans being made for the monthly bake sale which will be June 14. The annual membership drive was set for the first week in June.

Miss Clara Southward, case worker, told of two unusual gifts during April. One was the gift of 16 children's beds from the Pickaway County Children's Home, the other was a gift of sales tax stamps from an applicant, a young mother who had collected and saved them for the association.

Miss Southward made special mention of food received during the month from the Von Bora Society of the Lutheran Church, the Presbyterian and the Methodist Churches.

She reported the receipt of used clothing from 32 individuals and some new garments from the W. T. Grant Co.

Supplies given to 90 families included: 50 pairs of shoes, 27 hats, 135 garments and 151 miscellaneous articles for the home. Ten women were supplied with quilt patches.

Miss Southward listed 86 visits in the homes of applicants and 22 visits in their behalf; 163 office interviews with applicants, 21 interviews in concerning them.

Time was devoted to discussion of the scarcity of houses for the laboring class, many of whom live in unsanitary shacks, not from choice of necessity due to the lack of better ones for which they could pay.

GIDEON BROADCAST

The Berne, Indiana Mannerchor, chorus of 35 voices and twice winner of first prize in the National Chicago Musicland Festival, will be heard on a special broadcast from the convention of Ohio Gideons, widely-known Bible society, on Saturday.

The program is scheduled at 6:15 p. m. In addition to the music, it will include statements of Gideon activity by W. L. Hardin, international chaplain; A. C. Feigert, president of Ohio Gideons, and George D. Hawkins, State Bible secretary-treasurer.

A couple of airplane pilots were recent front row guests at James Melton's "Telephone Hour" broadcast. They were there at the invitation of the tenor whom they had flown to various parts of the country for concerts.

Lyn Murray may introduce several new tunes written by army men on his "Meet the Music" program. Murray's former secretary, Bob Kaplan, now in uniform, says that several of his buddies are great composers and he's sending their manuscripts to Lyn for a once-over.

Captain Wallace Caswell Jr., of Panama City, Florida, came on "We, the People" to tell how he fights man-eating sharks armed only with a small knife. After the broadcast, Capt. Caswell admitted that the microphone scared him much more than any leopard-shark he'd ever faced.

STATE PATROL MAY ESTABLISH NEW SUB-AREA

A state highway sub-station, which may serve a portion of Pickaway County, may be established at Washington C. H.

The station would locate three or four patrolmen at Washington C. H. to serve under a new district planned under the general reorganization of the patrol in Ohio.

The proposed sub-station is the result of the new highway patrol law passed by the legislature, providing for the addition of 100 more state highway patrolmen to the present force. Hal G. Sours, director of the Ohio Department of Highways, has announced that within 90 days when the highway patrol law becomes effective, a list of eligibles will have been established so that appointments may be made.

CONSERVATION AWARDS GO TO WALNUT SCHOOL

Youths Rated As Finest In County In Striving To Aid Wildlife

OTHERS RECEIVE PRIZES

Work Of Various Clubs Far Ahead Of Any Other Year In History

Walnut Township's conservation club has been voted the most active club in the county during the last year and takes first place position in the Pickaway County Farmers' and Sportsmen's contest. Five other clubs of the county will be recognized by the Farmers' and Sportsmen's Association for their conservation work and will receive cash awards. In order, they are Saltcreek, Washington, Deer Creek, Monroe and Pickaway.

Work of the clubs during the last year has surpassed that of previous years. Twelve clubs, representing all high schools in the county, have participated in the conservation program. Activities during the last year have included: 1. planting trees to produce more cover for wildlife; 2. planting food patches and assisting farmers in planting food patches; 3. construction of winter feeding stations and the distribution of food for wildlife; 4. gathering walnuts for squirrel feeding; 5. construction and installation of bird houses, squirrel dens and bird feeders; 6. work on predator control through pest hunts; 7. a study of Wildlife Resources of Ohio (this study was followed by a written test); 8. a study of game laws and instruction in the proper use of firearms; 9. the preparation of a float depicting features of conservation for the Pumpkin Show; 10. preparation and presentation of conservation programs and many other activities connected with conservation.

Grain For Wildlife
In Pickaway County this year there will be planted approximately 50 patches, small patches of grain which will remain unharvested for wildlife during the winter months. While the boys and girls are not responsible for all this planting, they are assisting to a great extent in some of the townships. In Walnut Township the club will plant two patches and three members of the club will plant individual patches at home. Washington Township boys will plant four food patches and the Perry Township boys two patches.

When a request for walnuts was made last fall, the Saltcreek boys and girls gathered 35 bushels. The Monroe boys gathered 27 bushels. Boys of Williamsport club planted a unit of trees on the farm belonging to Mr. Hill of Williamsport, while the boys of Walnut planted a patch on the farm of D. L. Steele.

One of the projects in which boys and girls participated wholeheartedly was the building of bird houses. The clubs averaged approximately one bird house for each club members. About 450 bird houses were put up in the county, a large percentage of them already being used.

Most important features of the conservation work is the gradual development of a conservation consciousness in the minds of the young people of the community.

The Farmers' and Sportsmen's Association will meet Thursday evening at 7:30 in Elks Hall. Refreshments will be served and all members of the association are urged to be present.

Crappies are reported to be biting in a number of the streams in the county. Some fishermen are catching them in the canal.

Too many rabbits are being killed on highways in Pickaway County. A motorist usually can avoid hitting rabbits if he exercises a little care in driving.

KEEPING STREETS CLEAN
AUDUBON, Ia. — Audubon's Streets Department is careful these days to see that the streets are scrupulously clean. The last time the streets became dirty and nothing was done, business men of the city got out with shovels, brooms, and buckets of water and did the job themselves. The streets department crew was out bright and early the next day.

CONVOYS

If I were President Roosevelt's closest adviser, jealous of his place in history, I would urge him to submit the convoy issue to Congress. A wise friend of the British Empire, anxious to maintain friendly relations with the United States during the coming decades, would do the same.

I have read Wendell Willkie's article in Collier's. For several reasons it leaves me unconvinced. It urges convoys but overlooks the question of keeping faith with the American people.

If, without Congress having been asked for additional powers, Mr. Roosevelt and Mr. Willkie and Mr. Churchill finally involve us in a shooting war, they will have taken on a terrific responsibility. The 83 percent of the American people who are not convinced that we should fight overseas will feel tricked and betrayed. The post war reaction will not be good for Mr. Roosevelt's place in history nor for friendly relations with the Empire.

Those who now advocate total war to total victory should cool down long enough to read some history. They should read the election returns of 1918 and 1920. I know. I campaigned for the Wilson principles. Having gone to war I hoped we would get a peace that justified our going. Yet in 1917 Congress was asked to and did declare war. Knowing that the reaction to all wars is tremendous, men who think war is now necessary, would, if they were wise, take steps to make the past war reaction as small as possible.

When the flag draped coffins begin to come off the ships people will ask, "Who got us into this?" It will be well then for Mr. Roosevelt and Mr. Willkie to be able to say, "Congress, and after a complete and honest disclosure of all facts."

It is said that by passing the Lease-Lend Act we are already committed to convoys and war if necessary. This is false.

The convoy matter was fully debated. Senator George, Chairman of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, took the position then, and has restated it now—no convoys unless Congress says so. It was explicitly understood that the title to munitions of war should pass to foreign powers when loaded on shipboard in American harbors so that if they were sunk in crossing the Atlantic they would not be our goods when sunk. On motion of Senator Clark of Missouri, an amendment was accepted to make that crystal clear. It says: "Nothing in this Act shall be construed to authorize conveying vessels by naval vessels of the United States," nor "the entry of any American vessel into a combat area."

Our responsibility under the Lease-Lend Act ends on this side of the ocean. We accepted no responsibility to deliver ships or cargoes on the other side of the ocean. If we are to extend our responsibility let Congress do it. Those interested in national unity now and hereafter had better not by-pass Congress. In less than a year congressional primaries will begin. The 200 members of Congress and Senate who voted against the Lease-Lend Bill, and the 300 members who voted for it will all be explaining their vote. And with the possible exception of Pepper, Smathers, Lee and Guffey, there will be few who will tell their people they intended to vote for war. That will leave a very big bag in very few hands.

CONSERVATION AWARDS GO TO WALNUT SCHOOL

Youths Rated As Finest In County In Striving To Aid Wildlife

OTHERS RECEIVE PRIZES

Work Of Various Clubs Far Ahead Of Any Other Year In History

Walnut Township's conservation club has been voted the most active club in the county during the last year and takes first place position in the Pickaway County Farmers' and Sportsmen's contest. Five other clubs of the county will be recognized by the Farmers' and Sportsmen's Association for their conservation work and will receive cash awards. In order, they are Saltcreek, Washington, Deercreek, Monroe and Pickaway.

Work of the clubs during the last year has surpassed that of previous years. Twelve clubs, representing all high schools in the county, have participated in the conservation program. Activities during the last year have included: 1. planting trees to produce more cover for wildlife; 2. planting food patches and assisting farmers in planting food patches; 3. construction of winter feeding stations and the distribution of food for wildlife; 4. gathering walnuts for squirrel feeding; 5. construction and installation of bird houses, squirrel dens and bird feeders; 6. work on predator control through pest hunts; 7. a study of Wildlife Resources of Ohio (this study was followed by a written test); 8. a study of game laws and instruction in the proper use of firearms; 9. the preparation of a float depicting features of conservation for the Pumpkin Show; 10. preparation and presentation of conservation programs and many other activities connected with conservation.

In Pickaway County this year there will be planted approximately 50 patches, small patches of grain which will remain unharvested for wildlife during the winter months. MODERN AMBASSADORS
IT'S hard to win much Latin-American trade, because as matters stand they haven't much to give us. But at last we seem to be finding a way to their hearts. We do it with movie stars.
The method was discovered when Hollywood recently invaded Mexico City en masse. They took the old Aztec capital by storm. No such enthusiasm had ever been aroused by anything or anybody from the United States. Our government, promptly taking the tip, has been actively encouraging popular film players to visit South America as good-will emissaries.
Douglas Fairbanks Jr., arriving in Brazil the other day as a representative of President Roosevelt, was received as if he had been the President himself. Possibly more so, because the Latins felt no need of being dignified in Doug's presence. There seems to be something about popular movie stars that just naturally thaws dignity and ignores race, and fuses people into one common blend of humanity.
Maybe in time we'll be picking our ambassadors from the screen stars.

WOMEN AND RADIO
THE leaders of a number of national women's organizations have decided to do something constructive about radio as far as their own connection with it is concerned. As they realized that they were using it more and more, they began to set aside a modest budget to cover air activities.
Now they have taken another step. If their messages by radio are to be effective, they say, they must cease to be amateurish. Scripts, production and background music hereafter will be prepared by professionals. Speakers will be chosen for suitable voice and a personality that can be projected by the spoken word. They will arrange for instruction in the art of broadcasting for their speakers.
Observers have begun to discover in recent years that the modern club woman with a serious purpose who takes up public speaking usually does a good job of it. Poise, directness and brevity are achieved. If they now tackle their radio presentations in the same way the results are bound to be good. Eventually, they may affect the commercial broadcasts which are a distressing part of some otherwise fine sponsored program.

WORLD AT A GLANCE —By— Charles F. Stewart
EXCEPT A LITTLE purely local stuff here and there, there's no news now outside the war, defense and aid-the-democracies classification. There's a fine assortment of that, however. It's got plenty of variety, it hits in every direction and some of it's amusing.
For instance, word came the other day from Rome that a pardon had been granted to George Elbert and Grace Gunther, two Americans convicted in Italy and sentenced to heavy fines and also to prison terms for violations of the Fascists' wartime currency regulations. The United States embassy pointed out to Duce Mussolini that the pair had offended through ignorance of the emergency rule on the subject; not intentionally. Accordingly, Benito waived the imprudent item. He collected the fines, though. The Fascist regime sees no particular sense in keeping its jails unnecessarily cluttered up with foreigners. It prefers them at large, spending money. But any of their cash that gets its clutches on, in the form of fines, it hangs onto.
State Secretary Cordell Hull's reaction to the Copenhagen government's repudiation of the barter trade made with Henrik de Gunst, Danish minister in London, for an American product over Danishly-owned land, also was entertaining. Of course the repudiation came only nominally from Copenhagen. It came really from Herr Hitler. Still, technically, it had every appearance of being strictly according to international Hoyle. GOVERNMENT PAYS RISK
WASHINGTON—It is hard to believe, but the Government of the United States actually is paying war risk insurance to the Japanese for helping to insure the S. S. America, pride of the U. S. merchant marine.
This is just part of the revelations over re-insurance which are breaking this week at the Justice Department. These probes also show that when a vessel is insured, Axis insurance companies get all the data regarding its cargo, time of departure, destination, and the interior plan of the ship.
Thus, despite all the censorship of Secretary of the Navy Knox, Germany has had an easy means of knowing all about every ship that leaves the United States.
This is accomplished when American insurance companies, because of the heavy risk involved in insuring a cargo in wartime, re-insure with various foreign companies. In other words, they sell part of the policy abroad, thus distribute the risk. That is how Japan makes a lush profit on insuring American vessels, even vessels owned by the U. S. A.
Last year Congress passed a law providing war risk insurance for U. S. shipping, but the Maritime Commission, for reasons best known to itself, has declined to take advantage of the law. Commission members state quite frankly that they wanted to throw the business to private insurance concerns—as long as private insurance was available.

BEGGING FOR INSURANCE
As a result, here is what happens when the S. S. America or some other vessel seeks insurance for a voyage. The operators of the America will get a certain amount of insurance at the rate of 75c per $100, but not enough properly to insure the cargo. Then they write to Bryant Ogden of the Insurance Bureau of the Maritime Commission asking for government insurance.
Mr. Ogden, under the law, is supposed to grant government insurance when private insurance is not available. But he writes back to say that other private insurance is available at a higher price. So the S. S. America finally gets its insurance for $1.50 per $100—but not all of it. When it can get no more at this price it again writes to Mr. Ogden, who again asks if the private insurance field is exhausted.
So this time the S. S. America gets more private insurance at the exorbitant price of $5 per $100. You can always get private insurance if you are willing to pay a steep enough price. And Mr. Ogden or the Maritime Commission, or both, seem to want no government competition with the insurance companies.

He didn't exactly question it, either. He merely answered, in effect, "Oh, well, in that case we'll go ahead with the bargain." That's present day diplomacy.
Incidentally, Minister de Kauffmann, recalled to Denmark, undoubtedly displayed first-rate judgment in announcing that he isn't going. He thinks he's safer here as the Danish people's representative; not as representative of only an alleged government run from Berlin.
For that matter, Washington's half full today of diplomats representing governments that don't exist any longer.
I've had occasion several times lately to refer to gossip to the effect that we're likely soon to have a censorship (probably known as a public information bureau) operating in our own capital. Now it seems possible that London, instead, will censor us. The foreign office there complains that American newspapers publish considerable stuff that's liable to be useful to the Axis, concerning British war activities. If we haven't the sense to know what ought to be kept hushed up, London will be glad to tell us. The state department itself is blamed (from London) for having given out some such information to American reporters. It would be getting right back to the source to have a British censorship slapped onto the state department—and a corking good joke on the department.

Science Making Headway on Heart Disease
By LOGAN CLENDENING, M. D.
● The intensive study of heart disease which has been made in the last twenty-five years has begun to give good results, as is indicated by an article from two Philadelphia physicians, who summarize the evidence to show that the outlook in heart disease is better today than it was a quarter of a century ago. It was once a sort of accepted idea that heart disease was hopeless and that the patient was doomed to a life of invalidism. Neither of these ideas remains true today.
Of the various causes of heart disease, we may say that the infections, rheumatism and syphilis, are both better treated than they were two decades ago, and the modern treatment leaves the patient with heart disease in better condition to face the future without danger of early circulatory failure than he was at that time.
We have often pointed out in these articles that acute articular rheumatism is a disease, not of the joints, but of the heart and that the greatest care should be taken with these patients to insist on a long period of rest and care after the acute symptoms have subsided. This makes much for the prevention of late crippling forms.
The Thyroid Gland
Another large field of potential heart damage lies in disease of the thyroid gland and here modern medical management and surgical management have done much to step in and prevent these patients from going on to a period of crippling disease. The thyroid can be removed or quieted in its early stages long before it has had an opportunity to continue to be poisonous and by the secretion of its poisons cause serious crippling damage to the heart muscles. The same is true of conditions of lowered secretion of the thyroid gland, which occur in middle-aged women and men. Nowadays our ability to detect these cases has greatly improved and our methods of treatment take them out of the field of the chronic invalid.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS
C.B.T.—(1) I think, slow flowing blood an indication of any kind of disease or lack of something in the diet? (2) Is a mastoid infection caused by hereditary disease?
Answer—(1) I doubt if anybody on earth could make a diagnosis of thick, slow flowing blood, and in health it is very unlikely that it ever occurs. (2) Heredity has nothing to do with mastoid disease. It is caused by infection of the throat going up the Eustachian tube into the middle ear.

COMBINE TWO COUPS
ALL OF the special coups to pick up a trick with a fancy finish to a hand are rather pretty things, including the trump coup to gain position over a defender's guarded honor, the lead-throwing end-plays of various types and the squeezes. But the most gaudy of all are those rare ones which combine two or more of the special plays, one of them to be used if a defender makes one play or discard and another if he chooses a different course. It requires a keen minded declarer to keep several such possibilities in his clear consciousness at the same time.

CHAPTER THIRTY-NINE
IT HADN'T BEEN easy to get rid of the newspaper men. But they were gone at last, and Betsy suggested hospitably to the colony. "It's too late for a real meal. Why don't we just scratch up something here and have it together, picnic fashion?"
The others shouted approval, and Betsy, Mrs. Edmonds and Terry disappeared into the kitchen to make sandwiches, salad and tea.
"Wonder where June is?" exclaimed Terry as she assembled lettuce and tomatoes and hunted for the salad bowls.
"I wonder where Brooks is," suggested Mrs. Edmonds. There was a curious infection in her voice that made Terry and Betsy look at her questioningly.
"Meaning just exactly what—or shouldn't I ask?" suggested Terry mildly—too mildly, for there was a glint in her eye that indicated she still had reserves against liking Mrs. Edmonds any too much.
Mrs. Edmonds smiled faintly and kept her eyes on the sandwiches she was cutting.
"Oh, I don't imagine he liked being labeled 'The Million Dollar Husband' very well. And there were some other things the newspapermen said," she added coolly. "He looked rather—well, rather black when he stalked away."
"I thought he looked like Laurence Olivier in a temper—and that looks pretty good to me," said Terry promptly. "Brooks is a pretty swell guy. Anybody want to make anything out of that?"
Mrs. Edmonds laughed, and her thin, penciled brows went up in a little look of amused dismay. "My dear!" she protested prettily. "Put down that wicked-looking knife when you speak in that tone. The two together are simply too dangerous. All I meant was that Brooks looked as though he'd like some solitude to get over his—well, shall we call it embarrassment?"
"And why should he be embarrassed?" demanded Terry, still beligerently. "After all, Natalie's got such scads of money—I don't suppose there's a man in the country with enough money to marry her and escape being called a fortune hunter. But Natalie's plenty human and plenty swell—and she's crazy about Brooks. I think it was darned swell of her to hand him a million bucks so he could have his own pocket money after they were married. A lot of women in her position might have gone around making Friend Husband hold out his grimy little paw every time he wanted 5 cents for a package of gum."
"Well!" said Mrs. Edmonds in delicate disdain.
Terry stared at her for a moment, then threw down the knife with which she had been peeling tomatoes and stalked out of the kitchen, too angry to speak. She pushed open the swinging door and all but fell over Natalie, who stood with her slim back pressed hard against the door at the other end of the tiny pantry. Her first startled look at the girl's white face and tortured eyes told Terry that Natalie had overheard the whole conversation.
Terry was tongue-tied for a moment.
"It's quite all right, Terry," said Natalie after a moment. "I proved an old adage wrong—the one about eavesdroppers hearing no good of themselves. Thank you for sticking up for me."
The Edmonds creature gets in my hair," Terry exploded. "She's always so darned busy minding other people's affairs!"
"Maybe that's because she hasn't any of her own, eh?" said Natalie, and tried to smile, though her eyes were sick with pain. Far too much pain to have been caused by overhearing the more or less harmless words that Terry and Mrs. Edmonds had exchanged in the kitchen.
"Look here, Natalie, you're not going to let that old cat get under your skin?" Terry burst out childishly, caring not a hoot that Mrs. Edmonds might very easily hear her. "She just talks to hear her brains rattling."
Natalie shook her head. "No, of course I don't mind what Mrs. Edmonds said," she answered, so softly that Terry had to lean close to hear her words. "But—oh, Terry, Terry—something has happened that's sort of snatched the ground from under my feet, and I'm scared, Terry. I'm so terribly scared."
Terry put quick, comforting arms about her as though Natalie had been the younger. "Don't, Natalie. Nothing's as bad as that."
"This is," said Natalie faintly. "It's much worse. I was looking for Brooks a while ago. And I found him—way down the beach—with June in his arms."
"It took a full moment to sink into the significance of that to sink into Terry's startled, ordinarily alert young mind. And when it did she

It would be getting right back to the source to have a British censorship slipped onto the state department—and a corking good joke on the department. In normal times all countries like to have big export volumes. A country with a handsome export balance, ordinarily assumes that it has lots of customers for its products—that it's prosperous; scooping in barrelful of money.

Consequently a recent commerce department report mentions with much satisfaction the fact that our 1940 exports to Britain almost exactly doubled 1939's. What the report doesn't emphasize, though, is the circumstance that 1940's were mainly war supplies, which we never expect to get paid for.

CHECKING PROFITEERING
Naturally nearly everybody is interested in the prevention of wartime profiteering, because, if that starts, our living costs will skyrocket—a great deal faster than our incomes are likely to increase. It'll pinch us like everything. So President Roosevelt's recent creation of an Office of Price Administration, with Leon Henderson at the head of it, to head off such a tendency, was widely welcomed.

Just how it's going to work I don't see. If a salesman is prohibited from charging market prices for his merchandise, I'd imagine that he'd stop selling it, and thus that there wouldn't be any of it available, which would be just as bad as being overcharged for it, particularly if it happened to be some absolute necessity. Nevertheless, economists say it can be done and, to prove it, the first thing Leon Henderson did was to crack down on the price of cadmium. Isn't that wonderful tidings? The next time, dear reader, that you have occasion to replenish your stock of cadmium, don't you let the dealer stick you for an excessive figure on it. If you don't know what it is, look it up in the dictionary. I had to.

Heart Surgery

The surgery of the heart in some respects has enabled us to prevent certain crippling mechanical deformities.

Besides this, our understanding of different forms of medication for the heart has greatly improved so that nowadays the use of foxglove and of drugs to relieve shortness of breath and dropsy is far in advance of what it was twenty or thirty years ago.

It may not be quite fair to say that cure occurs in cases of heart disease, but there are plenty of examples of people who have once been considered hopeless invalids, who have been rescued by modern methods of treatment from such a life, so that they are able to carry on ordinary activities with comfort and without depending on others for their livelihood and happiness.

The modern clinic in heart disease is one that is permeated with a spirit of hopefulness and optimism.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

C.B.T.:—(1) Is thick, slow flowing blood an indication of any kind of disease or lack of something in the diet? (2) Is a mastoid infection caused by hereditary disease?

Answer:—(1) I doubt if anybody on earth could make a diagnosis of thick, slow flowing blood, and in health it is very unlikely that it ever occurs. (2) Heredity has nothing to do with mastoid disease. It is caused by infection of the throat going up the Eustachian tube into the middle ear.

CONTRACT BRIDGE

COMBINE TWO COUPS

ALL OF the special coups to pick up a trick with a fancy finish to a hand are rather pretty things, including the trump coups to gain position over a defender's guarded honor, the lead-throwing end-plays of various types and the squeezes. But the most gaudy of all are those rare ones which combine two or more of the special plays, one of them to be used if a defender makes one play or discard and another if he chooses a different course. It requires a keen minded declarer to keep several such possibilities in his clear consciousness at the same time.

After the diamond 6 was led, South saw a possible loser in hearts and one in clubs, one of which must be prevented, also the chance of one in spades. To head off the trump menace, he first led to the spade A, which dropped the J, ending that worry. He led three more spades then, watching East's discards, which were a club and two hearts, North tossing a diamond on the last one. Three more diamonds were then run. West tossing off three hearts, and finally the last spade was led. West was in a spot. With three clubs and two hearts, the latter could not be discarded, so he had to choose a club. He saw that, if he picked the 9 or 10, declarer could take the dummy's club A and throw him in the lead with the K, so he would have to lead hearts. So he discarded his K, hoping East had the Q. North thereupon shed his heart 7 from dummy and East threw off a heart. So South then led to the club A and led the J, which East won. East had nothing left but the club 7 and heart 10, either of which would have to lead into the dummy's club 8 and heart A, so the combination squeeze and end-play worked to make the contract.

CHAPTER THIRTY-NINE

IT HADN'T BEEN easy to get rid of the newspaper men. But they were gone at last, and Betsy suggested hospitably to the colony, "It's too late for a real meal. Why don't we just scratch up something here and have it together, picnic fashion?"

The others shouted approval, and Betsy, Mrs. Edmonds and Terry disappeared into the kitchen to make sandwiches, salad and tea.

"Wonder where June is?" exclaimed Terry as she assembled lettuce and tomatoes and hunted for the salad bowls.

"I wonder where Brooks is," suggested Mrs. Edmonds. There was a curious infection in her voice that made Terry and Betsy look at her questioningly.

"Meaning just exactly what—or shouldn't I ask?" suggested Terry mildly—too mildly, for there was a glint in her eye that indicated she still had reserves against liking Mrs. Edmonds any too much.

Mrs. Edmonds smiled faintly and kept her eyes on the sandwiches she was cutting.

"Oh, I don't imagine he liked being labeled 'The Million Dollar Husband' very well. And there were some other things the newspapermen said," she added coolly. "He looked rather—well, rather black when he stalked away."

"I thought he looked like Laurence Olivier in a temper—and that looks pretty good to me," said Terry promptly. "Brooks is a pretty swell guy. Anybody want to make anything out of that?"

Mrs. Edmonds laughed, and her thin, pencilled brows went up in a little look of amused dismay. "My dear!" she protested prettily. "Put down that wicked-looking knife when you speak in that tone. The two together are simply too dangerous. All I meant was that Brooks looked as though he'd like some solitude to get over his—well, shall we call it embarrassment?"

"And why should he be embarrassed?" demanded Terry, still beligerently. "After all, Natalie's got such scads of money—I don't suppose there's a man in the country with enough money to marry her and escape being called a fortune hunter. But Natalie's plenty human and plenty swell—and she's crazy about Brooks. I think it was darned swell of her to hand him a million bucks so he could have his own pocket money after they were married. A lot of women in her position might have gone around making Friend Husband hold out his grimy little paw every time he wanted 5 cents for a package of gum."

"Well," said Mrs. Edmonds in delicate disdain.

Terry stared at her for a moment, then threw down the knife with which she had been peeling tomatoes and stalked out of the kitchen, too angry to speak. She pushed open the swinging door and all but fell over Natalie, who stood with her slim back pressed hard against the door at the other end of the tiny pantry. Her first startled look at the girl's white face and tortured eyes told Terry that Natalie had overheard the whole conversation.

Terry was tongue-tied for a moment.

"It's quite all right, Terry," said Natalie after a moment. "I proved an old adage wrong—the one about eavesdroppers hearing no good of themselves. Thank you for sticking up for me."

"The Edmonds creature gets in my hair," Terry exploded. "She's always so darned busy minding other people's affairs!"

"Maybe that's because she hasn't any of her own, eh?" said Natalie, and tried to smile, though her eyes were sick with pain. Far too much pain to have been caused by overhearing the more or less harmless words that Terry and Mrs. Edmonds had exchanged in the kitchen.

"Look here, Natalie, you're not going to let that old cat get under your skin?" Terry burst out childishly, caring not a hoot that Mrs. Edmonds might very easily hear her. "She just talks to hear her brains rattle."

Natalie shook her head. "No, of course I don't mind what Mrs. Edmonds said," she answered, so softly that Terry had to lean close to hear her words. "But—oh, Terry, Terry—something has happened that's sort of snatched the ground from under my feet, and I'm scared, Terry. I'm so terribly scared."

Terry put quick, comforting arms about her as though Natalie had been the younger. "Don't, Natalie. Nothing's as bad as all that."

"This is," said Natalie faintly. "It's much worse. I was looking for Brooks a while ago. And I found him—way down the beach—with June in his arms."

It took a full moment for the significance of that to sink into Terry's startled, ordinarily alert young mind. And when it did she caught her breath and gasped, before she could check her words. "Why, the good for nothing pup!"

Natalie winced. "No, he's not. Terry. He's fine and decent—and everything I wanted in a man. It's I who have failed him somewhere."

"You!" Terry fairly snorted. "You've given him the world on a solid gold platter!"

"Maybe that's just it, Terry. Maybe he'd rather have worked for it—with someone like June," said Natalie, tortured with the memory of that moment when she had stood there, dazed and incredulous, watching that unbelievable scene; her husband, a bridegroom, making love to another man's bride. It sounded like something in a French farce—not the sort of thing that happens in real life; not in HER life.

"Have you told Donald?" asked Terry after a moment.

"No, of course not—why should I?" Natalie answered almost haughtily.

Terry shrugged, ran nervous fingers through her already tumbled curls, and flung out her other hand in a little gesture of helplessness. "Well, after all, he is her husband. It seems to me he ought to be at least mildly interested in such shenanigans," she pointed out with deceptive mildness. "But of course I could be wrong about that. I've been wrong about a lot of things in my time."

"This concerns only Brooks and me," said Natalie steadily. "If Brooks wants a divorce, I shall give it to him, of course."

"Sure," said Terry, and made no secret of her supreme disgust at that. "You would. You're soft—much too soft to fight. So you'll just be ladylike and refined. You make me sick!"

"What else could I do?" Natalie stammered.

"Being you—nothing," answered Terry sharply. "But if it was me—if some other woman took my Bill—it would be over my dead body. But then, of course, I haven't been handicapped, as you have, by being brought up as a lady. I've always fought for what I wanted, and the battle I'd put up against any woman who wanted my Bill would make a May Day riot look like a Sunday school picnic."

"But—to try to hold a man who no longer wants you—" Natalie shivered and set her teeth. "I couldn't, Terry—I couldn't! After all, a woman has to have some pride!"

Hints on Etiquette

If there is any doubt in your mind as to whether to tell a certain story to friends or not, don't tell it. Telling a tale that is off-color may give you an undesirable reputation, especially if you are a woman.

Today's Horoscope

When celebrating your birthday today, take this advice to heart: refuse to be drawn into conflict with employers, superiors, elders, relatives or friends during the year just starting. If this caution is heeded, you may expect good fortune and happiness during this time. The child born on this date will have many good qualities—will be ambitious, practical, persevering, original and idealistic. Such a one may be somewhat dogmatic, however. Success is assured provided impulsive actions are restrained and quarrels avoided.

STARS SAY—

For Wednesday, May 14

ALTHOUGH there may be splendid opportunities for the achievement of some form of public good, perhaps with transportation, communications, writings or speechmaking, yet there are several angles for defeat, opposition or crafty undermining from superiors, elders, friends as well as inimical interests. This may be provoked by impetuous words or acts, inspired by a sarcastic or caustic frame of mind. Such unhappy attitude may enter the domestic or social relations to the detriment of fond hopes and wishes.

Those whose birthday it is may be on the brink of a year of excellent opportunity for growth, expansion, success and happiness even though there are signs of enmity and antagonism coming from employers, superiors, elders, even friends and relatives. Benefits come from decisive self-control in speech, acts and writings, and not from impetuosity and bitterness. And the accent for progress is placed on public relations, group and community welfare.

A child born on this day should have splendid abilities, with much versatility and energy, but may provoke opposition because of its caustic tongue or impetuous nature.

Miss Ferguson and Mrs. Baughman gave excellent reports of the recent State Convention at Hotel Van Cleave, Dayton, which they attended as delegates.

The sorority also voted to give sums of money to the Circleville Boy Scout and Girl Scout troops. Mrs. Baughman was hostess for the evening and served confections during the informal social hour.

Eastern Star

Thirty-five members were present for the regular meeting of the Order of the Eastern Star Tuesday in Masonic Temple.

After the opening ceremonies in charge of Mrs. F. K. Blair, worthy matron, Mrs. E. L. Price, secretary read an invitation to attend the inspection of Chillicothe Chapter Wednesday, May 28.

Mrs. Blair announced that the next regular meeting, May 27, would be "Neighborhood Night" and that members of the M. Z. Kreider Chapter, Lancaster, would be guests. A splendid program and social hour have been arranged for this meeting and members were urged to keep the date in mind. The worthy matron also called attention to the inspection of Circleville Chapter Friday and asked that reservations for the dinner and breakfast be made with Mrs. T. E. Wilson as soon as possible.

Mrs. Herman Hill, chairman of the housing committee, announced that more rooms were needed for the guests remaining over night and asked anyone who is able to accommodate visitors to call her, phone 612.

Mrs. E. S. Shane, chairman of the decorating committee, requested any members having flowers to donate for use at inspection to notify her or any other member of the committee so that they might be collected. After the chapter was closed, a brief Mother's Day program was presented. Mrs. Blair introduced Mrs. Dudley Carpenter who sang two selections, "My Mother Bids Me Bind My Hair" and "Mother". Mrs. Carpenter was accompanied at the piano by Mrs. Ervin Leist. Two readings were offered, "Beatitudes of a Mother" by Mrs. George Forst and "My Mother's Garments" by Mrs. E. L. Tolbert. The formal closing of the chapter concluded the meeting.

STARS SAY—

For Wednesday, May 14

ALTHOUGH there may be splendid opportunities for the achievement of some form of public good, perhaps with transportation, communications, writings or speechmaking, yet there are several angles for defeat, opposition or crafty undermining from superiors, elders, friends as well as inimical interests. This may be provoked by impetuous words or acts, inspired by a sarcastic or caustic frame of mind. Such unhappy attitude may enter the domestic or social relations to the detriment of fond hopes and wishes.

Those whose birthday it is may be on the brink of a year of excellent opportunity for growth, expansion, success and happiness even though there are signs of enmity and antagonism coming from employers, superiors, elders, even friends and relatives. Benefits come from decisive self-control in speech, acts and writings, and not from impetuosity and bitterness. And the accent for progress is placed on public relations, group and community welfare.

A child born on this day should have splendid abilities, with much versatility and energy, but may provoke opposition because of its caustic tongue or impetuous nature.

Feller Defeats Yanks; McCarthy Praises Hurler

New York Manager Says Young Cleveland Fireballer To Find Way To Hall Of Fame; Bondreau's Hit Is Winner

By Pat Robinson

NEW YORK, May 14—At 22, Bob Feller is in a class by himself as a pitcher. He stands head and shoulders above the pack. And so good a judge as Joe McCarthy, boss of the Yanks, said today that only time stands between the young Iowa plough jockey and a niche in the baseball hall of fame.

"He can't miss taking his place alongside Christy Mathewson, Walter Johnson and Pete Alexander," said McCarthy. "He's got everything. Youth and strength and speed and curves and heart and head. And now he's learned how to pitch. How can he miss with that equipment?"

No American Leaguer will be surprised if the youngster hangs up 30 victories this year, a feat not accomplished since Dizzy Dean turned the trick for the Cardinals back in 1934.

Bob notched his sixth victory of the still young campaign yesterday when he rode in, 2 to 1, on Lou Bondreau's homer off Marius Russo in the tenth inning. Through that stretch he gave the Yanks only six hits and struck out nine and would not have been scored on had he not made a wild throw to first base.

Hold Tightened That victory tightened the Indians' hold on first place for the White Sox turned back the Red Sox, 3-2. Johnny Rigney held the Red Sox to four hits, half of which were homers by Jimmy Foxx and Ted Williams.

Rip Radcliff's homer off Jack Knott was the only damaging blow the Browns struck as they blew one to the Athletics, 7-3. Those who picked the Browns to finish in the first division this year have begun to realize the team is going nowhere unless it can dig up some pitchers.

Only last fall Buck Newsom, the talkative Tiger, was a pitching hero in the World Series. Now he can't seem to get going. He was knocked out of the box again yesterday as Sid Hudson held the Tigers to three hits to score a 5-4 decision for the Senators.

And over in the other circuit the world champion Reds are still floundering around behind a long-continued and mysterious slump in hitting. Today they are 9½ games behind the pace-setting Dodgers and if they don't brace up in a hurry they will soon be out of the race.

They made only six hits off Hugh Casey, the big Dodger right hander yesterday as they dropped a 4-3 verdict behind their ace Bucky Walters. Walters himself brought about his own defeat when he made a two-run wild pitch.

Dodgers Confident That victory was the fifth straight for Casey and the sixth in a row for the Dodgers who completely sold on their own ability to bring home the bacon this year.

However, they may have a real fight on their hands all the way from the Cardinals who kept pace with them by eking out a 3-2 decision over the Giants in the ninth.

The Cubs rode in, 4-3, on Hank Leiber's three run homer and the Pirates downed the futile Phillies, 6-3, in a game featured by eight errors evenly divided between the clubs.

HEROES AND GOATS HEROES: Hugh Casey, Dodgers, who held Reds to six hits, Lou Bondreau, Indians, whose homer beat Yanks, Johnny Rigney, White Sox, who gave Red Sox only four hits, Sid Hudson, Senators, who held Tigers to three hits.

GOATS: Bucky Walters, Reds, whose wild pitch lost game, Marius Russo, Yanks, who three homer ball in tenth to beat Yanks, Buck Newsom, Tigers, again knocked out, this time by Senators, Tom Early, Braves, who forced in winning run with a pass.

The Chicago Cubs have won the National League pennant at intervals of three years ever since 1929, hunch followers point out.

OHIO-KENTUCKY EVEN COLUMBUS, May 14—Ohio State University and Kentucky University baseball teams called everything even today as the Kentucky nine recorded a 6 to 2 victory over the Buckeyes. The Bucks defeated the Kentuckians Monday.

In yesterday's contest, Ohio State left 13 men stranded on the bases. The Buckeyes' 10 hits came at the wrong moments but not so Kentucky's seven safe blows.

Brooklyn Dodger fans are counting on Curt Davis to win 22 games for the Flatbush Cause this season because Catcher Mickey Owen says Curt looks as good as he did in the spring of 1939. In 1939 Davis racked up 22 victories with the St. Louis Cardinals, and his catcher was the same Mickey Owen.

Just a Change

If you haven't been too bored with pictures of Hank Greenberg in the army, here's still another, showing the slugging outfielder of the Detroit Tigers all dressed up in his private's uniform at Camp Custer, Battle Creek, Mich.

Orr In Line For Mentor Job In East

Newark High Coach May Succeed Bixler; Other Sports Rumors

By Larry Newman COLUMBUS, May 14—Sports potpourri gleaned along the Buckeye mainline. . . . Clifford "Red" Orr, who has compiled a great basketball record at Newark High School, is in the front ranks for the cage job relinquished by Paul Bixler at Colgate University. . . . and Walter "Pinky" Wilson, genial football coach at Findlay High School, is a strong contender for the head grid position at Muskingum College, vacated some months ago by Stu Holcomb, who moved on to Washington and Jefferson. . . .

Bill Edwards, the ex-Western Reserve mentor who is now handling the reins of the Detroit Lions professional team, came to Columbus last week end to look over Tackle Jim Daniels in the Buckeye clinic game, but went away singing the praises of Dick Fisher, the "Columbian Clipper." . . . "That kid's a natural and should be okeh for the pros," boomed big Bill. . . . Seal the name of Johnny Hallabrin, of Mansfield, in your fedora for reference when the Ohio State gridgers get under way next fall. . . . Johnny was "the" power back in the clinic game. . . . and was great defensively. . . .

More Coaches Called Here are just a few of the high school coaches who have been called to the service of their country. . . . Tibby Young, of Lima South; Nip Hine, of Alliance; Hugh Hayes, of Barnesville; Woody Hayes, of New Philadelphia; Bob Brown, of Gallon, and Johnny Banyas, of Millersburg. . . .

Eldon Newland, ace twirler of the Greenfield McClain baseball nine, hurled a near-perfect game as the Tigers shutout Pomeroy in the Southeastern Ohio Tournament. . . . Newland allowed no hits and but one Pomeroy batsman reached first base on the lone pass he issued. . . .

Fremont Ross is searching for a new candidate for head football coach after Clarence "Soup" Campbell, of Van Wert, accepted the Cleveland Shaw post. . . . the other candidate for the Ross officials were considering probably won't accept. . . . he also was a leading contender for the Shaw post.

And 1941 is the third year since their last pennant—so this could be their year again.

REDS FAIL, 4-3, PUT DERRINGER ON HILL TODAY

Bucky Walters' Wild Heave One Of Vital Blows In Brooklyn's Favor

CINCINNATI, May 14—Veteran Paul Derringer today was to attempt to put new life into the fading Cincinnati Reds and at the same time stop the Brooklyn Dodgers' win streak of six straight.

The Dodgers defeated the Redlegs, 4 to 3, in the first game of their western tour in Cincinnati yesterday as Hugh Casey recorded his fifth straight victory of the year. The burly Brooklyn right-hander hurled six-hit ball and only twice gave as many as two hits in one inning.

However, before the Reds had gotten their two runs, the Dodgers had nicked Bucky Walters for there. Walters himself allowed only eight hits.

In the second, Joe Medwick opened with a single and Cookie Lavagetto doubled and Dolph Camilli drove out a long fly that brought in the first Brooklyn run. Walters wild-pitched two more runs home in the next inning.

Frey and Lombardi led the Redleg attack with two safeties each.

Whitlow Wyatt was expected to hurl for the league leaders against the Reds today.

MILLERS IN POSSESSION OF LOOP'S TOP POSITION

COLUMBUS, May 14—Minneapolis took over first place in the American Association today, a half-game ahead of the Kansas City Blues and a full game ahead of third-place Louisville.

The Millers outslugged the St. Paul Saints 16 to 13, to record a 11 to 4 victory over their twin-city rivals. Huck Geary and Hub Walker led the Miller attack with three hits each. It was the only league game scheduled.

Today's schedule finds the eastern clubs playing each other, with Columbus at Toledo and Louisville at Indianapolis. In the Western sector, Kansas City is at Milwaukee and St. Paul at Minneapolis.

DYKES FIRES HIMSELF

CHICAGO, May 14—Manager Jimmy Dykes of the Chicago White Sox is going to be fired tomorrow—but he'll do the firing himself. Although 44 years old, Dykes has kept himself for years on his team's "active player" list, presumably for sentimental reasons. But tomorrow his "retirement" will become official.

CHICAGO, May 14—Col. Matt Winn, "Mr. Derby" to most American racing fans, was back in Chicago today bubbling over with cheer because his 1941 Kentucky Derby on May 3 "was the most successful of all."

"More than 100,000 people saw the Derby this year," said the genial counsel, "and saw, incidentally, one of the fastest distance horses ever foaled win it."

"I have seen many horses with a great burst of speed through the final quarter, but none quite like Whirlaway," enthused the Derby master. "He moves like a flash of lightning when once in motion, and it doesn't appear now that any horse is his equal over a distance of ground, provided, of course, that he has a jockey who can control him."

TRIBE ENJOYING LIFE; PECK SAYS NO STRIFE NOW

NEW YORK, May 14—Besides trying to prove they're the best club in the American League, those once wild Indians from Cleveland today have another pet theory they wish to convince you is fact, the same being that all is peaceful in the tribal tepee.

The Indians, so far, haven't missed a trick to show everybody they mean business both about beating the league's top team and about being a harmonious group of citizens.

Insofar as they're setting the pace these days for New York's Yankees, Boston's Red Sox & Co., there can be no dispute now as to their knack for winning games.

But, as for peace and harmony, you must hearken to what the Indians say:

Chieftain Roger Peckinpaugh, as spokesman for the Tribe, asserted:

"I told the players as soon as I became manager that last year was forgotten and all I was worrying about was this year. So far, I haven't had to worry, and I don't think I will. We've got a hustling, ambitious club."

The new Cleveland manager explained further that he had not ordered the Indians to observe any extraordinary training rules. "We get to bed by twelve, and before that time the fellows are not likely to get into much trouble," he chuckled.

McNEILL, BOBBY RIGGS TO TANGLE AT KENYON

GAMBIER, May 14—A preview of the coming summer's national amateur tennis championship pictures will be shown at Gambier, Ohio, on Sunday, May 18th, when Don McNeill meets Bobby Riggs in a feature of an exhibition match given for the Alumni and friends of Kenyon College, who are cordially invited to attend.

Definite plans for the meet were made public today by Dr. Gordon Keith Chalmers, President of the College. The affair, two singles clashes and a doubles match will start at 3:00 p. m.

Don McNeill, Kenyon's most famous athlete and holder of the 1940 National Singles Crown (he beat Riggs last summer at Forest Hills), will oppose Riggs in one singles match, with Lewis and Talbert colliding in the other. McNeill and Lewis will then team up to oppose Riggs and Talbert in a doubles match.

Morey Lewis, No. 2 man on the Kenyon team during McNeill's graduate days, hasn't appeared on the Lord courts since 1939. Talbert, a Cincinnati star, lost to McNeill in the finals of last year's district intercollegiate qualifying at Gambier.

Riggs, now a member of the Presbyterian College admissions department, held the National Crown before losing to McNeill last summer.

WHIRLWAY FASTEST IN STRETCH, WINN STATES

CHICAGO, May 14—Col. Matt Winn, "Mr. Derby" to most American racing fans, was back in Chicago today bubbling over with cheer because his 1941 Kentucky Derby on May 3 "was the most successful of all."

"More than 100,000 people saw the Derby this year," said the genial counsel, "and saw, incidentally, one of the fastest distance horses ever foaled win it."

"I have seen many horses with a great burst of speed through the final quarter, but none quite like Whirlaway," enthused the Derby master. "He moves like a flash of lightning when once in motion, and it doesn't appear now that any horse is his equal over a distance of ground, provided, of course, that he has a jockey who can control him."

Feller Defeats Yanks; McCarthy Praises Hurler

New York Manager Says Young Cleveland Fireballer To Find Way To Hall Of Fame; Bondreau's Hit Is Winner

By Pat Robinson

NEW YORK, May 14—At 22, Bob Feller is in a class by himself as a pitcher. He stands head and shoulders above the pack. And so, good as Joe McCarthy, boss of the Yanks, said today that only time stands between the young Iowa plough jockey and a niche in the baseball Hall of Fame.

"He can't miss taking his place alongside Christy Mathewson, Walter Johnson and Pete Alexander," said McCarthy. "He's got everything. Youth and strength and speed and curves and heart and head. And now he's learned how to pitch. How can he miss with that equipment?"

Orr In Line For Mentor Job In East

Newark High Coach May Succeed Bixler; Other Sports Rumors

By Larry Newman

COLUMBUS, May 14—Sports potpourri gleaned along the Buckeye mainline.

Clifford "Red" Orr, who has compiled a great basketball record at Newark High School, is in the front ranks for the cage job relinquished by Paul Bixler at Colgate University.

Wilson, genial football coach at Findlay High School, is a strong contender for the head grid position at Muskingum College, vacated some months ago by Stu Holcomb, who moved on to Washington and Jefferson.

Bill Edwards, the ex-Western Reserve mentor who is now handling the reins of the Detroit Lions professional team, came to Columbus last week end to look over Tackle Jim Danelli in the Buckeye clinic game, but went away singing the praises of Dick Fisher, the "Columbian Clipper."

That kid's a natural and should be okeh for the pros," boomed Bill. Seal the name of Johnny Hallabrin, of Mansfield, in your folders for reference when the Ohio State gridders get under way next fall.

Johnny was "the" power back back in the clinic game. . . and was great defensively. . .

More Coaches Called

Here are just a few of the high school coaches who have been called to the service of their country. . . Tibby Young, of Lima South; Nip Hime, of Alliance; Hugh Baintine, of Barnesville; Woody Hayes, of New Philadelphia; Bob Brown, of Galion, and Johnny Banayas, of Millersburg. . .

Eldon Newland, ace twirler of the Greenfield McClain baseball nine, hurled a near-perfect game as the Tigers shutout Pomeroy in the Southeastern Ohio Tournament. . . Newland allowed no hits and but one Pomeroy batsman reached first base on the lone pass he issued. . .

Fremont Ross is searching for a new candidate for head football coach after Clarence "Soup" Campbell, of Van Wert, accepted the Cleveland Shaw post. . . the other candidate for the Ross officials were considering probably won't accept. . . he also was a leading contender for the Shaw post.

The Chicago Cubs have won the National League pennant at intervals of three years ever since 1929, hunch followers point out.

And 1941 is the third year since their last pennant—so this could be their year again.

Brooklyn Dodger fans are counting on Curt Davis to win 22 games for the Flatbush Cause this season because Catcher Mickey Owen says Curt looks as good as he did in the spring of 1939. In 1939 Davis racked up 22 victories with the St. Louis Cardinals, and his catcher was the same Mickey Owen.

OHIO-KENTUCKY EVEN

COLUMBUS, May 14—Ohio State University and Kentucky University baseball teams called everything even today as the Kentucky nine recorded a 6 to 2 victory over the Buckeyes. The Bucks defeated the Kentuckians Monday.

In yesterday's contest, Ohio State left 13 men stranded on the bases. The Buckeyes' 10 hits came at the wrong moments but not so Kentucky's seven safe blows.

REDS FAIL, 4-3, PUT DERRINGER ON HILL TODAY

Bucky Walters' Wild Heave One Of Vital Blows In Brooklyn's Favor

CINCINNATI, May 14—Veteran Paul Derringer today was to attempt to put new life into the fading Cincinnati Reds and at the same time stop the Brooklyn Dodgers' win streak of six straight.

The Dodgers defeated the Redlegs, 4 to 3, in the first game of their western tour in Cincinnati yesterday as Hugh Casey recorded his fifth straight victory of the year. The burly Brooklyn right-hander hurled six-hit ball and only twice gave as many as two hits in one inning.

However, before the Reds had gotten their two runs, the Dodgers had nicked Bucky Walters for there. Walters himself allowed only eight hits.

In the second, Joe Medwick opened with a single and Cookie Lavagetto doubled and Dolph Camilli drove out a long fly that brought in the first Brooklyn run. Walters wild-pitched two more runs home in the next inning.

Frey and Lombardi led the Redleg attack with two safeties each. Whitlow Wyatt was expected to hurl for the league leaders against the Reds today.

TRIBE ENJOYING LIFE; PECK SAYS NO STRIFE NOW

NEW YORK, May 14—Besides trying to prove they're the best club in the American League, those once wild Indians from Cleveland today have another pet theory they wish to convince you is fact, the same being that all is peaceful in the tribal tepee.

The Indians, so far, haven't missed a trick to show everybody they mean business both about being the league's top team and about being a harmonious group of citizens.

Insufar as they're setting the pace these days for New York's Yankees, Boston's Red Sox & Co., there can be no dispute now as to their knack for winning games.

But, as for peace and harmony, you must hearken to what the Indians say:

Chieftain Roger Peckinpaugh, as spokesman for the Tribe, asserted:

"I told the players as soon as I became manager that last year was forgotten and all I was worrying about was this year. So far, I haven't had to worry, and I don't think I will. We've got a hustling, ambitious club."

The new Cleveland manager explained further that he had not ordered the Indians to observe any extraordinary training rules. "We get to bed by twelve, and before that time the fellows are not likely to get into much trouble," he chuckled.

McNeill, Bobby Riggs TO TANGLE AT KENYON

GAMBIER, May 14—A preview of the coming summer's national amateur tennis championship pictures will be shown at Gambier, Ohio, on Sunday, May 18th, when Don McNeill meets Bobby Riggs in a feature of an exhibition match given for the Alumni and friends of Kenyon College, who are cordially invited to attend.

Definite plans for the meet were made public today by Dr. Gordon Keith Chalmers, President of the College. The affair, two singles clashes and a doubles match will start at 3:00 p. m.

Don McNeill, Kenyon's most famous athlete and holder of the 1940 National Singles Crown (he beat Riggs last summer at Forest Hills), will oppose Riggs in one singles match, with Lewis and Talbert colliding in the other.

McNeill and Lewis will then team up to oppose Riggs and Talbert in a doubles match.

More Lewis, No. 2 man on the Kenyon team during McNeill's graduate days, hasn't appeared on the Lord courts since 1939. Talbert, a Cincinnati star, lost to McNeill in the finals of last year's district intercollegiate qualifying at Gambier.

Riggs, now a member of the Presbyterian College admissions department, held the National Crown before losing to McNeill last summer.

WHIRLWAY FASTEST IN STRETCH, WINN STATES

CHICAGO, May 14—Col. Matt Winn, "Mr. Derby" to most American racing fans, was back in Chicago today bubbling over with cheer because his 1941 Kentucky Derby on May 3 "was the most successful of all."

HESS WRITING, LONDON HEARS

possibly unearth a means of destroying the regime he typifies.

British officialdom again emphasized that German communiques attributing Hess' journey to "mental derangement" are entirely without foundation. They released a statement from one of the physicians on the scene who said: "Hess is not unnaturally high-strung after his ordeal. But he is one of the sanest and most logical men I have ever met."

While Hess was reported spending a great deal of time in writing—possibly a complete, sensational revelation of the war-time set-up of the Reich—Whitehall continually warned correspondents against "going out on a limb" with speculation and surmise that no matter how wild may actually prove to be, it is ever.

Rumors Continued

Yet the guesswork continued, and the London press itself was no more bystander in the game.

Once again came theories that Hess, fearful at one and the same time that Germany was going Bolshevick and that the British Empire faced destruction, came rushing to Britain as a Messiah of peace.

One source, on the other hand, said that Hess was attempting to foment an "anti-war" revolution in Germany. By proclaiming Germany's "guilt" and the "full truth" of conditions, this informant said, Hess had hopes of giving life to "another Germany" which would cooperate with Britain and the United States in the interests of a "decent peace."

The Nazi deputy party leader who started the world by parachuting to earth in Scotland, was reported in excellent spirits despite the fact he was a heavily guarded prisoner of war.

All that has been disclosed on that point is that he is now in a hospital "somewhere in Britain." In this hideaway, it is understood, he is making "good progress" and he broken ankle he sustained in his bizarre parachute jump is responding to treatment.

Also slight abrasions on his arms are rapidly healing under hospital care.

Authorities revealed Hess may be sufficiently rested in a few days to leave the hospital. They declared he is now enjoying a light diet of chicken and fresh eggs.

In addition he listens occasionally to news bulletins broadcast by the British radio—a pastime forbidden to Germans in the Reich—and converses freely with his nurses and the officer guarding him.

Military authorities have seized all his possessions that he brought with him, excepting his clothing. Churchill is expected to give to the House of Commons at an early date all "usable" details of Hess' comments. But, it was emphasized, anything deemed of sufficient value to be kept secret from the enemy will not be announced.

The prime minister, therefore, is expected to disclose only Hess' personal feelings regarding Hitler and the world situation.

Word seeping through the thick blanket of censorship cloaking Hess revealed that he is spending every spare moment writing some mysterious article.

So intent he is on this task, according to the London Daily Mirror, that it "seems to have developed into a compelling passion."

And as Hess worked, word spread through authoritative British quarters that the former lieutenant of Chancellor Hitler—whom Germany now brands insane—may reveal by pen and under questioning all the most closely held secrets of the Nazi war hierarchy.

QUARRELS HAVE MERITS

WILKES-BARRE, Pa., Dr. Nathaniel F. Cantor, social science professor at the University of Buffalo, believes that happy married life is dependent upon quarrels. "After the argument," he said, "the man and his wife are apt to feel happier than before the quarrel started."

William Henry Jackson, pioneer photographer and painter, often called the first news photographer, observed his 98th birthday in Washington D. C., recently. As a young soldier in the war between the states, he used every quiet moment to sketch whatever he saw, and his notebook of the war became an important document.

While state and federal officials sought to end the walkout, Mayor Thomas Spellacy also announced that his office was prepared to do anything to end the strike. He urged that "every effort" be made to resume production.

Expansion In Progress

The company's government orders cover 30 and .50 caliber machine guns, side-arms, and 37-millimeter cannon. Plant expansion of $2,500,000 is in progress.

SAN FRANCISCO, May 14—Dependence on Washington to take action in the San Francisco Machinists' strike heightened today as a deadlock tightened about 11 shipyards and repair shops where work on $500,000,000 in United States navy craft and cargo vessels is stalled and 20,000 workers idle in the nation's most critical defense tieup.

While American Federation of Labor and CIO leaders directing the three-day-old strike of 1,900 machinists played a waiting game along with officials of the Pacific Coast Drydock Association, Walter A. Haas, president of the San Francisco Chamber of Commerce, hoped for speedy response to his urgent pleas for federal intervention.

In a telegram to President Roosevelt, Haas described the strike as "a body blow" at the National Defense program and a "flagrant violation" of the spirit and purpose of the recently negotiated coastwise ship-building pact which outlawed strikes and lockouts in Pacific Coast shipyards.

The machinists walked out over demands for double pay for overtime instead of time and one-half and wage increases from $1.12 to $1.15 an hour.

OAKLAND, Cal., May 14—Negotiations between 65 strikebound northern California canneries and officials of the American Federation of Labor Cannery Workers Union were deadlocked today after a compromise wage proposal was rejected by the employers.

With the asparagus canning season approaching its peak, more than 9,000 workers from Visalia to northern California were idle.

Growers in the San Joaquin and Sacramento River delta region called a special meeting at Stockton to map further plans and declared they were suffering losses of $100,000 a day.

Sherid Moran, president of the San Joaquin County unit of the associated farmers, indicated the growers would appeal to Washington for aid.

"We've got to keep cutting or we'll lose the crop and there's no place to take it after we cut it," he said.

NEW YORK, May 14—John L. Lewis, president of the CIO's United Mine Workers, today threatened to call a general strike of 400,000 soft coal miners in the Appalachian area, both north and south, unless southern mine operators come to a wage agreement with the union by the end of this week.

Judging by the clouds of dust emanating from back yards these house-cleaning days, we may have to abandon that old simile about being as "snug as a bug in a rug."

whom he has been faithful for 20 years, Hess apparently tried to take matters in his own hands and make a getaway to Britain.

"To understand Hess' possible motive in this melodramatic flight it is necessary to understand what has been going on within Germany. There is a growing feeling that Germany sooner or later is coming to the end of the rope. The highest army circles feel that Hitler already has overreached himself and that the time has come to throw him overboard and seek a compromise peace with England."

the seven seas if necessary to protect American interests.

The Maritime Commission announced last week that regular cargo service will be instituted to the Red Sea. When asked if there are any American ships there now, Dempsey said "let's not go into that." Another commission official, however, said that there are no U. S. ships there, but added that the German action "does not preclude American shipping going there in the near future."

BERLIN, May 14—Germany's proclamation that the Red Sea henceforth is a zone of war operations "dangerous" to international shipping was regarded today as a direct challenge to the United States' aid-Britain program.

Informed quarters viewed the decree as a retort to President Roosevelt's recent order permitting American merchant vessels to enter the Red Sea, gateway to the Suez Canal.

"Any ships operating in the Red Sea are exposing themselves to danger and destruction by mines and other instruments of war," the German proclamation said.

(Editor's Note: Authoritative quarters in Washington regarded the German proclamation as injecting a grave new note in the aid-Britain campaign but expressed the view that it was not likely to "intimidate" President Roosevelt. Vessels in American harbors already are loading cargoes for shipment to the area now proclaimed perilous by the Nazis.)

Zone Outlined

The danger zone as outlined by Germany extends from the northern area of the Red Sea, including the gulfs of Suez and Akabah, down the full length of the waterway to the straits of Bab El Mandeb.

Territorial waters of Saudi Arabia, however, are excluded from the "war zone," as is the Persian Gulf.

supply ship was set on fire. Another 2,000-ton supply ship was stated to have been hit and left in a sinking condition off Ushant.

BERLIN, May 14—Ten British planes were declared today to have attacked the German base at Helgoland with explosive bombs, causing slight damage to buildings and killing seven civilians.

Several other persons were injured, the high command said, but no military damage was done.

During the night, a communique added, German bombers sank two merchant vessels totalling 10,000 tons and damaged a third off the English east coast.

Six British Bristol-Blenheim bombers attacked St. Nazaire yesterday afternoon without causing damage, it was stated. Three of the planes were said to have been shot down.

Although council at its meeting last Wednesday night told merchants that it was ready to accept any plan of parking that was agreeable to the merchants, a feeling has spread among the merchants that a different plan may be offered to them Wednesday night.

George Griffith, chairman of the Retail Merchants Committee, has urged all merchants to attend the meeting starting at 8 o'clock.

Action of the cabinet council followed a meeting yesterday between Pétain and United States Ambassador Admiral William D. Leahy during which the subject of French neutrality in the war was understood to have been discussed.

Leahy was reported to have brought considerable pressure to bear on Pétain to prevent possible French military assistance to the Reich. The question of food supplies in unoccupied France also was said to have been discussed.

Darlan returned to Vichy last night after conferring with Chancellor Hitler at Berchtesgaden and German authorities at Paris on the question of French "collaboration" with Germany in establishing a "new order" in Europe.

What concessions Darlan may have made to the Germans or received from them have not yet been officially revealed, although the communique's statement that effects of the negotiations soon would be apparent was deemed significant.

personally to subject Hess to a searching questioning.)

At the same time, these same sources declared, the documents prove that Hess remained 100 percent loyal to Chancellor Hitler. Meanwhile, the official news agency deprecated the value to Britain of Hess' trip.

"Herr Hess was not informed of the Reich's military plans which were available only to the smallest circle," the agency said. "But he knew enough to come to the conclusion that the war would end with destruction of England."

"Hess intended to confer with the Duke of Hamilton, whom he believed possessed the necessary influence in England. He was fully convinced of the success of his mission and expected to return to Germany within two days. He even believed Britain would give him the necessary fuel for the return flight."

"Hess informed no one of his plans—not even his family." Nazi quarters in Berlin added: "Hess in our eyes is no traitor or fugitive."

An Idealist

"We regard him as an idealist with a Messiah complex, who visioned himself returning from England as a peace-maker."

It was asserted Hess "obviously" deliberately crashed the Messerschmitt he used on his flight to prevent its falling into British hands.

Authoritative circles said that Hess, far from undertaking any anti-Nazi activity, planned to convey in a personal message to the British his conviction that Hitler would be able to smash the British Empire unless an early compromise were arranged.

For this reason, it was stated, Hess hoped to convince his English friends that the British had no chance against Germany if they kept on fighting.

German quarters declared that British jubilation over the Hess affair will be short-lived when the London government discovers "Hess' true intentions."

"Furthermore," they said, "we believe that some weeks hence England will have other things than Hess which to occupy herself."

In explaining Hess' "mission," the statement pointed out that Hess had become acquainted with the Duke of Hamilton at Olympic games before the war and had always had an "English" outlook. He regarded the last war and the present conflict as "Twentieth Century tragedies" and was convinced that he could find some common sense solution.

Whether he maintained any contact with the British during recent months was not known, but German quarters inferred that circles close to the duke encouraged him in pursuance of his peace intervention plans.

"May Boomerang"

Authentic quarters reassured that British illusions concerning a "crack" in the Nazi setup are due for a rude awakening and that Hess is a "hot brick that will prove a boomerang."

Afternoon newspapers in Germany made no further mention of the matter, but discussion of Hess' venture overshadowed everything else in cafes, restaurants and on the street.

British officialdom again emphasized that German communists attributing Hess' journey to "mental derangement" are entirely without foundation. They released a statement from one of the physicians on the scene who said: "Hess is not unnaturally high-strung after his ordeal. But he is one of the sanest and most logical men I have ever met."

While Hess was reported spending a great deal of time in writing—possibly a complete, sensational revelation of the war-time set-up of the Reich—Whitehall continually warned correspondents against "going out on a limb" with speculation and surmise that no matter how wild may actually prove lukewarm when the full story is told, if ever.

Informed quarters viewed the decree as a retort to President Roosevelt's recent order permitting American merchant vessels to enter the Red Sea, gateway to the Suez Canal.

"Any ships operating in the Red Sea are exposing themselves to danger and destruction by mines and other instruments of war," the German proclamation said.

(Editor's Note: Authoritative quarters in Washington regarded the German proclamation as injecting a grave new note in the aid-Britain campaign but expressed the view that it was not likely to "intimidate" President Roosevelt. Vessels in American harbors already are loading cargoes for shipment to the area now proclaimed perilous by the Nazis.)

Zone Outlined

The danger zone as outlined by Germany extends from the northern area of the Red Sea, including the gulfs of Suez and Akabah, down the full length of the waterway to the straits of Bab El Mandeb.

Territorial waters of Saudi Arabia, however, are excluded from the "war zone," as is the Persian Gulf.

EXILE DOUBTFUL IF DEPUTY WILL BETRAY HITLER

whom he has been faithful for 20 years, Hess apparently tried to take matters in his own hands and make a getaway to Britain.

"To understand Hess' possible motive in this melodramatic flight it is necessary to understand what has been going on within Germany. There is a growing feeling that Germany sooner or later is coming to the end of the rope." The highest army circles feel that Hitler already has overreached himself and that the time has come to throw him overboard and seek a compromise peace with England.

BRITISH PLANES IN HEAVY RAID ON HELGOLAND

supply ship was set on fire. Another 2,000-ton supply ship was stated to have been hit and left in a sinking condition off Ushant.

BERLIN, May 14—Ten British planes were declared today to have attacked the German base at Helgoland with explosive bombs, causing slight damage to buildings and killing seven civilians.

Several other persons were injured, the high command said, but no military damage was done.

During the night, a communication added, German bombers sank two merchant vessels totalling 10,000 tons and damaged a third off the English east coast.

Six British Bristol-Blenheim bombers attacked St. Nazaire yesterday afternoon without causing damage, it was stated. Three of the planes were said to have been shot down.

PARKING METER PLAN IS HINTED

be twenty degree angle parking on Main and Court Streets with one hour time limit. Retail merchants arrived at the plan after a lengthy discussion of the parking problem Monday night.

Although council at its meeting last Wednesday night told merchants that it was ready to accept any plan of parking that was agreeable to the merchants, a feeling has spread among the merchants that a different plan may be offered to them Wednesday night.

George Griffith, chairman of the Retail Merchants Committee, has urged all merchants to attend the meeting starting at 8 o'clock.

VICHY

Suez and bases on French Morocco for a drive on Gibraltar.)

Action of the cabinet council followed a meeting yesterday between Petain and United States Ambassador Admiral William D. Leahy during which the subject of French neutrality in the war was understood to have been discussed.

Leahy was reported to have brought considerable pressure to bear on Petain to prevent possible French military assistance to the Reich. The question of food supplies in unoccupied France also was said to have been discussed.

Darlan returned to Vichy last night after conferring with Chancellor Hitler at Berchtesgaden and German authorities at Paris on the question of French "collaboration" with Germany in establishing a "new order" in Europe.

What concessions Darlan may have made to the Germans or received from them have not yet been officially revealed, although the communiqué's statement that effects of the negotiations soon would be apparent was deemed significant.

personally to subject Hess to a searching questioning.)

At the same time, these same sources declared, the documents prove that Hess remained 100 percent loyal to Chancellor Hitler. Meanwhile, the official news agency deprecated the value to Britain of Hess' trip.

"Herr Hess was not informed of the Reich's military plans which were available only to the smallest circle," the agency said. "But he knew enough to come to the conclusion that the war would end with destruction of England."

"Hess intended to confer with the Duke of Hamilton, whom he believed possessed the necessary influence in England. He was fully convinced of the success of his mission and expected to return to Germany within two days. He even believed Britain would give him the necessary fuel for the return flight."

"Hess informed no one of his plans—not even his family." Nazi quarters in Berlin added: "Hess in our eyes is no traitor or fugitive."

An Idealist

"We regard him as an idealist with a Messiah complex, who visioned himself returning from England as a peace-maker." It was asserted Hess "obviously" deliberately crashed the Messerschmitt he used on his flight to prevent its falling into British hands.

Authoritative circles said that Hess, far from undertaking any anti-Nazi activity, planned to convey in a personal message to the British his conviction that Hitler would be able to smash the British Empire unless an early compromise were arranged.

For this reason, it was stated, Hess hoped to convince his English friends that the British had no chance against Germany if they kept on fighting.

German quarters declared that British jubilation over the Hess affair will be short-lived when the London government discovers "Hess' true intentions."

"Furthermore," they said, "we believe that some weeks hence England will have other things than Hess which to occupy herself."

In explaining Hess' "mission," the statement pointed out that Hess had become acquainted with the Duke of Hamilton at Olympic games before the war and had always had an "English" outlook. He regarded the last war and the present conflict as "Twentieth Century tragedies" and was convinced that he could find some common sense solution.

Whether he maintained any contact with the British during recent months was not known, but German quarters inferred that circles close to the duke encouraged him in pursuance of his peace intervention plans.

"May Boomerang"

Authentic quarters reasserted that British illusions concerning a "crack" in the Nazi setup are due for a rude awakening and that Hess is a "hot brick that will prove a boomerang."

Afternoon newspapers in Germany made no further mention of the matter, but discussion of Hess' venture overshadowed everything else in cafes, restaurants and on the street.

ASSAULT CHARGED

Gilbert Stonerock, 20, of Ashville, was fined $25 and costs and committed to County Jail Wednesday on assault and battery charges filed by his wife, Paye. Justice of Peace B. T. Hedges, before whom Stonerock pleaded guilty, said a quarrel between the couple had developed Tuesday night when Mrs. Stonerock accused her husband of visiting beer parlors in Circleville.

panies turn around and re-insure with a pool, including the Tokyo Fire and Marine Insurance Co., the Meiji Insurance Company of Tokyo, Generale of Trieste (an Italian firm) and five German companies.

This insurance pool also includes Scandia of Copenhagen, a country which has been taken over by Hitler; Cristiana General of Norway, also Nazi occupied; and Lo General of Paris, also in the hands of the Nazis.

When a ship is insured, information regarding its cargo, destination, etc., is passed around among the insurance companies which participate. Thus the Nazis probably have known—through reinsurance companies—all about every vessel sailing.

Note—In the case of the S. S. America, the United States Government owns a heavy mortgage and control of the vessel, also pays it a heavy subsidy. Yet the Maritime Commission shuns the insurance fund voted by Congress and lets part of the profits—as well as the confidential information—go to Axis insurance companies.

SUMNER WELLES' HUMOR

Tall, dignified Sumner Welles, Under Secretary of State, has the erect bearing of a guardsman, sometimes awes people by his austere manner. Underneath, however, he is anything but austere, has a rich sense of humor. Here is the latest story he tells on himself.

After a late banquet in the Willard Hotel, Welles came down in the same elevator with two women who were slightly intoxicated.

"Say," said one of them in a highly audacious whisper, "look who we have with us in the elevator—Sumner Welles!"

"What!" That old stick-in-the-mud replied the other. "That couldn't be Sumner Welles."

UNDER THE DOME

The Nelson Rockefeller committee for cultural relations with South America wasn't at all keen about the Douglas Fairbanks goodwill pilgrimage. They resented Franklin Roosevelt, Jr., close friend of Fairbanks, putting this one over with his father while they weren't looking.

A lot of people looked for Senate Floor Leader Barkley during the Senate fight on Pan American Airways last week. The President had asked defeat of Pan Am, partly because the fight got personal, he being accused of being the tool of the Lehman banking interests. But when the vote came, Barkley was missing.

ARMY AND NAVY RULE

Only insiders caught the significance of that last minute Cox amendment to the defense priorities bill in the House of Representatives.

Purpose of the rider, as explained by Chairman Carl Vinson of the Naval Affairs Committee, was to set up an independent agency to administer the far-reaching priority powers created by the bill. What Vinson did not say was that the amendment actually would make a handful of generals and admirals the real economic rulers of the country.

Here is how this carefully disguised scheme would work: The new Priorities Director would have a $12,000 salary, be appointed by the President and have to be confirmed by the Senate, but, actually, he would be boss in name only. The real power of this all-important agency would be wielded by the Joint Army and Navy Munitions Board, made up wholly of brasshats. Under the adroitly worded language of the amendment, the "independent" Priorities Director would be completely under their thumb.

Defense insiders say real authors of the amendment are the admirals and generals, working under cover with Representatives Vinson and Gene Cox of Georgia, who see eye-to-eye with the Navy's crack-down on labor. Vinson sponsored the so-called "anti-strike" bill that was so extreme the Rules Committee gagged at it. Cox is among the foremost union-busters in Congress.

Navy brasshats never have taken kindly to civilian control of the defense program, have repeatedly tried to under mine it. But congressional leaders have been warned that unless the Vinson-Cox amendment is eliminated, Roosevelt will veto.

panies turn around and re-insure with a pool, including the Tokyo Fire and Marine Insurance Co., the Meiji Insurance Company of Tokyo, Generale of Trieste (an Italian firm) and five German companies.

This insurance pool also includes Scandia of Copenhagen, a country which has been taken over by Hitler; Cristiana General of Norway, also Nazi occupied; and Le General of Paris, also in the hands of the Nazis.

When a ship is insured, information regarding its cargo, destination, etc., is passed around among the insurance companies which participate. Thus the Nazis probably have known—through reinsurance companies—all about every vessel sailing.

Note—In the case of the S. S. America, the United States Government owns a heavy mortgage and control of the vessel, also pays it a heavy subsidy. Yet the Maritime Commission shuns the insurance fund voted by Congress and lets part of the profits—as well as the confidential information—go to Axis insurance companies.

SUMNER WELLES' HUMOR

Tall, dignified Sumner Welles, Under Secretary of State, has the erect bearing of a guardsman, sometimes awes people by his austere manner. Underneath, however, he is anything but austere, has a rich sense of humor. Here is the latest story he tells on himself.

After a late banquet in the Willard Hotel, Welles came down in the same elevator with two women who were slightly intoxicated. "Say," said one of them in a highly audible whisper, "look who we have with us in the elevator—Sumner Welles!"

"What! That old stick-in-the-mud?" replied the other. "That couldn't be Sumner Welles."

UNDER THE DOME

The Nelson Rockefeller committee for cultural relations with South America wasn't at all keen about the Douglas Fairbanks goodwill pilgrimage. They resented Franklin Roosevelt, Jr., close friend of Fairbanks, putting this one over with his father while they weren't looking. . . . A lot of people looked for Senate Floor Leader Barkley during the Senate fight on Pan American Airways last week. The President had asked defeat of Pan Am, partly because the fight got personal, he being accused of being the tool of the Lehman banking interests. But when the vote came, Barkley was missing.

ARMY AND NAVY RULE
 Only insiders caught the significance of that last minute Cox amendment to the defense priorities bill in the House of Representatives.

Purpose of the rider, as explained by Chairman Carl Vinson of the Naval Affairs Committee, was to set up an independent agency to administer the far-reaching priority powers created by the bill. What Vinson did not say was that the amendment actually would make a handful of generals and admirals the real economic rulers of the country.

Here is how this carefully disguised scheme would work: The new Priorities Director would have a $12,000 salary, be appointed by the President and have to be confirmed by the Senate, but, actually, he would be boss in name only. The real power of this all-imposed agency would be wielded by the Joint Army and Navy Munitions Board, made up wholly of brasshats. Under the adroitly worded language of the amendment, the "independent" Priorities Director would be completely under their thumb.

Defense insiders say real authors of the amendment are the admirals and generals, working under cover with Representatives Vinson and Gene Cox of Georgia, who see eye-to-eye with the Navy's crack-down on labor. Vinson sponsored the so-called "anti-strike" bill that was so extreme the Rules Committee gagged at it. Cox is among the foremost union-busters in Congress.

Navy brasshats never have taken kindly to civilian control of the defense program, have repeatedly tried to under mine it. But congressional leaders have been warned that unless the Vinson-Cox amendment is eliminated, Roosevelt will veto.

DRAFT BOARD CLEARS WAY FOR REGISTRATION OF YOUNGER MEN

CLASSIFICATION TO BE FINISHED IN SHORT TIME

Draftees Get 10 Days To Wind Up Affairs Before Journey To Camps

ADVISED BOARD BUSY

Only 10 Men Called From Pickaway County During Last Two Months

Last of 2,800 questionnaires sent out by the Pickaway County Selective Service board since the enactment of the Selective Service Act were due Wednesday at the draft board office. A few of the last list of questionnaires sent out have not yet been returned, local draft officials said.

With all questionnaires in, the draft board expects to complete its classification within two weeks and will have its registration completed well before July 1, the date set unofficially for registration of young men in the county who have become 21 years old since last October's registration.

Local officials estimate another registration in 1941 would affect approximately 150 young men. According to state Selective Service headquarters, the July 1 registration would include 57,000 young men in Ohio. New registrants would be given order numbers, starting above the last order number of the board. The local board has received no instructions regarding the registration.

10 Days Granted Now

Selective Service officials at the local office have been notified by state headquarters of an amendment to regulations which will allow drafted men ten days in which to adjust their personal affairs after an order to report for induction has been received. According to Lt. Col. C. W. Goble, State Selective Service director, the 10-day adjustment period may be extended by local boards up to 60 or more days if needed. Previously the draftee was allowed only five days to report for induction after he received his notice.

Last session of the Advisory Board Tuesday brought a flood of registrants into the local draft board office to get help in filling out their questionnaires. More than 150 questionnaires poured into the local office, according to draft officials, and 62 registrants visited the Advisory Board during the afternoon. The day was pronounced one of the busiest the local draft board has had.

With questionnaires received from last registrants, Selective Service officials warned Wednesday that any man in the county of eligible draft age who had not received a questionnaire should contact the local office at once.

1-A Men Ready

Completion of the classification will mean that the local board will be prepared to send all Class 1-A men into service at a moment's notice. However, a heavy drain on the available list is not expected. The last two months have seen a definite lull in the requests for men by state draft headquarters. During April and May only 10 men have been called into service. An advance notice for six more men on May 26 has been received, but the call has not been made official. Twelve replacements have been sent from the county during April and May.

a spokesman for the employees. Details of the settlement were not disclosed.

MANY CHANGES SCHEDULED FOR OHIO ASSEMBLY

Representation To Be Set Up In Different Manner By State Officials

PICKAWAY NOT ALTERED

Several Counties Combine To Send Lone Senator In Later Sessions

A proposal for sweeping changes in legislative representation for Ohio counties and districts during the next 10 years, as drawn by Secretary of State John E. Sweeney, will not change the status of Pickaway County.

The proposed readjustment, a decennial requirement based on the federal census, was embodied in a plan on which the secretary of state will confer with Governor Bricker and State Auditor Joseph T. Ferguson.

Ohio will have smaller senate memberships during the next ten years under the proposed reapportionment, and numerous changes will affect the election of lower house members.

George Neffner, state election expert, said that under the 1940 census population of 6,907,612, the ratio of representation for a state representative was fixed at 69,076 and for a state senator at 197,360. Regardless of its size, each county is entitled to at least one representative.

The next general assembly session, the 95th, will have only 34 senators as will the 96th and 98th, while the 97th will have 36, as at present, and the 99th will have 35.

Pickaway and Franklin Counties will continue as the Tenth Ohio district, being entitled to two senators each session, just as at present.

Fayette, Clinton and Greene will be combined to elect one senator, Athens, Hocking and Fairfield Counties will be represented by one senator.

Ross and Highland by one, and Madison Clark and Champaign by one.

DRAFT BOARD CLEARS WAY FOR REGISTRATION OF YOUNGER MEN

CLASSIFICATION TO BE FINISHED IN SHORT TIME

Draftees Get 10 Days To Wind Up Affairs Before Journey To Camps

ADVISED BOARD BUSY

Only 10 Men Called From Pickaway County During Last Two Months

Last of 2,800 questionnaires sent out by the Pickaway County Selective Service board since the enactment of the Selective Service Act were due Wednesday at the draft board office. A few of the last list of questionnaires sent out have not yet been returned, local draft officials said.

With all questionnaires in, the draft board expects to complete its classification within two weeks and will have its registration completed well before July 1, the date set unofficially for registration of young men in the county who have become 21 years old since last October's registration.

Local officials estimate another registration in 1941 would affect approximately 150 young men. According to state Selective Service headquarters, the July 1 registration would include 57,000 young men in Ohio. New registrants would be given order numbers, starting above the last order number of the board. The local board has received no instructions regarding the registration.

10 Days Granted Now

Selective Service officials at the local office have been notified by state headquarters of an amendment to regulations which will allow drafted men ten days in which to adjust their personal affairs after an order to report for induction has been received. According to Lt. Col. C. W. Goble, State Selective Service director, the 10-day adjustment period may be extended by local boards up to 60 or more days if needed. Previously the draftee was allowed only five days to report for induction after he received his notice.

Last session of the Advisory Board Tuesday brought a flood of registrants into the local draft board office to get help in filling out their questionnaires. More than 150 questionnaires poured into the local office, according to draft officials, and 62 registrants visited the Advisory Board during the afternoon. The day was pronounced one of the busiest the local draft board has had.

With questionnaires received from last registrants, Selective Service officials warned Wednesday that any man in the county of eligible draft age who had not received a questionnaire should contact the local office at once.

1-A Men Ready

Completion of the classification will mean that the local board will be prepared to send all Class 1-A men into service at a moment's notice. However, a heavy drain on the available list is not expected. The last two months have seen a definite lull in the requests for men by state draft headquarters. During April and May only 10 men have been called into service. An advance notice for six more men on May 26 has been received, but the call has not been made official. Twelve replacements have been sent from the county during April and May.

MANY CHANGES SCHEDULED FOR OHIO ASSEMBLY

Representation To Be Set Up In Different Manner By State Officials

PICKAWAY NOT ALTERED

Several Counties Combine To Send Lone Senator In Later Sessions

A proposal for sweeping changes in legislative representation for Ohio counties and districts during the next 10 years, as drawn by Secretary of State John E. Sweeney, will not change the status of Pickaway County.

The proposed readjustment, a decennial requirement based on the federal census, was embodied in a plan on which the secretary of state will confer with Governor Bricker and State Auditor Joseph T. Ferguson.

Ohio will have smaller senate memberships during the next ten years under the proposed reapportionment, and numerous changes will affect the election of lower house members.

George Neffner, state election expert, said that under the 1940 census population of 6,907,612, the ratio of representation for a state representative was fixed at 69,076 and for a state senator at 197,360. Regardless of its size, each county is entitled to at least one representative.

The next general assembly session, the 95th, will have only 34 senators as will the 96th and 98th, while the 97th will have 36, as at present, and the 99th will have 35.

Pickaway and Franklin Counties will continue as the Tenth Ohio district, being entitled to two senators each session, just as at present.

Fayette, Clinton and Greene will be combined to elect one senator, Athens, Hocking and Fairfield Counties will be represented by one senator.

Ross and Highland by one, and Madison Clark and Champaign by one.
